

Pour vous aider à faciliter votre apprentissage de français, servez-vous de ces sites et services gratuits sur internet:

<https://www.wordreference.com/> THE best dictionary kind of resource on the internet. Don't forget to scroll down in the entries to see if something specific to your needs is there. The entries are quite exhaustive, and there are forum pages linked that can be interesting, too: sometimes professional translators use this resource, so it's really great.

<https://conjuguemos.com/activities/french/verb/1> You can do many activities here without logging in, but if you want to play with a friend (some of the games are a lot of fun), the code for our account is obkjoy. This site provides great review materials as well as opportunities to learn new vocabulary.

If you're interested in conversation practice and comprehension, this is kind of old-school, but the dialogues are in accurate, native-speaker French.

<https://www.open.edu/openlearn/languages/french/bon-depart-beginners-french?track=7>

I ran across the resource just above via this site: <https://www.learning-french-online.org/> Lots and lots of goodies to explore here.

And of course, there's <http://www.tv5monde.com/> Videos, songs, games, news--so much to do on this site!

Here's the site where you can copy and paste your composition and receive advice and correction in a legitimate way: <https://bonpatron.com/en/>